I am pretty confident that, as usual, he's not going to get too far.

WHY IS IT that horses owners have to paint 'HORSES' on the side of their horseboxes. It's obvious what's in it...it's a horsebox. You don't see Currys painting 'TELEVISIONS' on the sides of their vans, do you?

TALKING about bird flu, I recently found a dead swan. I remembered the warnings that accompanied the previous H5N1 scare, so I called the authorities. How foolish I felt when I remembered I was the Queen and the dead swan was my tea.

WHAT a shame young Andy Murray once again failed to live up to expectations at Wimbledon. I am writing this letter on the first day of the tournament and he's not been knocked out yet, but

The King is Dead! God Save the Ling!

FOLLOWING the tragic death earlier this year of Abdul Latif, Lord of Harpole, the search has been on to find a replacement mentally unstable, ethnic minority North East entrepreneur to represent Viz's interests in the wider business community. We've interviewed hundreds of applicants, and after a long Apprentice-style elimination process, we have finally made our appointment.

The winning candidate, Ling Valentine, is the proprietor of the Gateshead-based vehicle contract hire company LingsCars.com. She was born in China and is so mental that we have already been forced to take out three restraining orders on her. And to celebrate her appointment as the comic's business ambassador, she's giving away a packet of alarming-looking instant noodles to every Viz reader who rents a car from the huge range available at LingsCars.com.
